

The Convenience of Storage Pods

Storage pods eliminate the stress and aggravation of dealing with a moving company's schedule, and their ease of use, security, and safety are incomparable. Once pods arrive at your house, you decide how long you want to take to fill them, when the company should pick them up, when they should be delivered to your new home, and how long you have to empty them. Pods significantly reduce the stress of moving house.

Using storage pods is simple. You call the company and order the number of pods you will need, then specify the date you want them to arrive. The company brings the empty pods to your home. You pack them at your own pace and lock them, then call the company for pickup. They load them onto their truck and either take them directly to your new home, or hold them in their storage facility until you call for them. When the pods arrive at your new home, you empty them, then call for pickup, and the company takes them away. It is that easy. You may not even need to be home when the company drops off and picks up the pods.

Although pods are excellent any time you are moving house, they are exceptionally well suited to moves in which you will not be moving into your new home immediately. For instance, you may plan to spend a month or two living in a short term rental apartment and looking for a house in your new town after you have closed on the sale of your previous house. If you go through a regular moving company, you will have to have your belongings delivered to storage (with all the wear and tear of moving them off the truck and into the storage unit), then you will have to have them loaded onto a new truck to be brought to your new house. In essence, you move twice and pay twice. With storage pods, your possessions stay secure in the pod throughout the process, so they run far less risk of damage, and the price for storing the pods and reloading them when you are ready for them is factored into the fee. You move only once, and you pay for the move only once. In addition, it is normal to store pods for a long time, so you do not have to deal with bewildered calls from the moving company asking you when you want your things.

As you can see, pods are simple to use. Their convenience can remove a lot of the stress from even the most complicated move. Why not simplify your upcoming move and place an order for storage pods? More Pod storage | Portable storage | Self storage | Self-storage |
